Highly motivated to work for companies operating in the Information and Technology (IT) sector, as well as industries related to research, development or manufacture of technology-based products and services. But it does not rule out the possibility that I will be open to any job opportunities related to the abilities I have. Such as the ability to understand Web Programming, Internet Network Infrastructure and IT Support Officer. I am a person who is process and detail oriented to produce good work, easy to adapt to various conditions in the environment, good communication skills and a strong willingness to continue learning.

BIOGRAPHY

Throughout my life, I have demonstrated dedication and perseverance, especially in academics and non-academic activities. In school, I successfully maintained a ranking student status and developed leadership skills as the head of the student organization. Continuing to college, I am actively engaged in various organizations on and off-campus, not only focusing on academic achievements but also contributing students to teaching activities and serving as a source of inspiration for fellow students. My interest in gaining personal experiences led me to the adventure of mountain expedition exploration, where I faced not only physical challenges but also enhanced my risk management skills and mental resilience. I also discovered a calling to help others through humanitarian volunteer activities, particularly in disaster relief efforts in Indonesia. With this background, I am confident that the combination of my academic experience, leadership, and community involvement can bring a positive contribution to this company.
